The Catholic Hymnal
201 CR 432, Englewood, TN 37329

Gregorian Chant formed the first hymns. Chant has two forms, syllabic and melismatic. Some of the earliest hymns are chants, set to a repeating, mainly syllabic text, with a bit of melisma thrown in. Examples include Adoro Te Devote and Jesu Dulcis Memoria.

As the use of local language for devotions outside of Mass became popular, writers, composers and eventually publishers rose to the challenge. English hymns were commonly published as text only, no music, in the mid to late 1800's. By the early 1900's, published hymn books which combined text and music were popular. By studying these old hymn books, one can trace the development as hymns as we know them today - from single line chant; to chant melodies harmonized in block harmony; and finally, four vocal parts written on two staves.

"Melody only" versions were often published for the congregation, but it was also common to print "SA," two part hymnals. In this hymnal you will find common versions of "Bring Flowers Of The Rarest," "Mother, Dearest," and "Mother Dear, O Pray For Me," which were written for two parts (female voices) with a simple Alberti Bass accompaniment in the left hand. With the prohibition of men and women singing together in the choir loft, these two-part arrangements were common. For modern use, these three hymns also appear here in SATB settings that we have created.

Early 1800's hymns were written with the basic note being a half note. In the early 1900's, this changed and the quarter note the most common note length, though the eighth note was also popular. Notice the change in appearance of "Bring Flowers Of The Rarest" in the SATB version, in the modern doubled note length.

How can you use these hymns? We will, upon receipt of your email, permit copying of hymns you request. Or you may wish to order hymnals for your choir. But we also offer you the ability to purchase and download a digital PDF file of this book, which will give you license to reproduce hymns to create bulletins and song books.

We enjoy hearing from people who sing from our music, so please drop us a note.

3 Thine own sin-less heart was bro-ken, Sor-row's sword had balm-y air, Lis-ten, gen-tle Queen of hea-ven, aught de-filed, With thy wings of mer-cy co-ver,

pierced its core; Ho-ly Mo-ther, by that to-ken,

lis-ten to my ves-per pray'r.
Keep from sin thy help-less child.
Now thy pi-ty I im-plore.

4
Queen of heaven, guard and guide me,
Save my soul from dark despair;
In thy tender bosom, hide me,
Take me, Mother, to thy care.

5
Mother of my Infant Savior,
Spouse of God, my plaint, oh hear;
Purest Virgin, gracious Matron,
In temptation's hour be near.

6
From my happy seat in Sion,
Guide me thro' this dark abode,
Smile, oh gently smile upon me,
Tell my sorrows to my God.
